Sci-fi feature Fugitive from Asteron, adapted from Gen LaGreca's award-winning novel, has unveiled its official trailer ahead of American Film Market 2025.

The film stars Henry Ian Cusick (Lost, The 100), Rory Gibson (The Young and the Restless), Morgan Bradley (American Skyjacker), and Dean Cain (Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman).

Directed by Dan T. Hall (Noble Vision, Greek Fire – Demon Spirit) and executive produced by LaGreca’s Winged Victory Foundation, Fugitive from Asteron was shot across Southern California and Central Indiana and is now in the final stages of post-production.

In Fugitive from Asteron, Arial (Gibson), a young pilot, escapes the oppressive planet Asteron by stealing the spacecraft of its ruthless ruler, Feran (Cusick). With a mysterious and powerful cargo on board, Arial lands on a future Earth and assumes a new identity: Alexander.

Feran soon follows, desperate to reclaim the cargo—a device tied to his secret plans for Earth. Teaming up with pilot Kristin Merrett (Bradley), Alexander must uncover the truth about his stolen cargo and confront a threat that could doom the planet. The film intertwines adventure, romance, and high-stakes mystery, exploring humanity’s timeless search for freedom and purpose.

Dean Cain co-stars as Mykronie Whitman, head of the Interplanetary Travel Division at Merrett Aerospace Systems, and a fellow escapee from Asteron decades earlier. Watch the trailer below:
